This software is used for simulating bandwidth and disk space requirements for recording or live streaming video captured with a Canon network camera. Ensure that you have read and understood the following notes before using this software.

<Notes>

[Selecting hard drives based on the calculated results]

* The values calculated by this software are only to be used as a guide. The actual amount of data may fluctuate greatly according to such factors as the recording subjects and recording environment.

* In addition to video and audio, a system data area is also required for the operating system and the recording software. When preparing the hard drives for the storage server, please provide ample spare disk space.

[Notes for users of the Canon Network Video Recorder RM Series]

* RM Series storage servers regard free disk space falling below the following value as the disk space warning value level, and they are designed to automatically delete data starting from the old data.

(Number of connected cameras + 1) x 64 MB

Please note that the results calculated by this software for the recordable period do not take this specification into account.

[Usage Notes and Precautions]

* Some cameras that can be selected with this tool may include models that are not sold in some countries or regions.

* This tool calculates data sizes in weeks. As a result, "Total Recording Data Capacity" and "Recordable period" are displayed in weeks.

* The selected model and video compression method affect the options available under other settings.

* This software requires settings (video quality, size, etc.) that differ according to the time for recording, even with a single camera.

Create settings for each time slot and calculate the total amount of data from the values for those amounts. You cannot create settings that cross over dates.

To configure settings that cross over dates, create settings split into night (0:00 to 8:00), day (8:00 to 18:00), and night

(18:00 to 24:00).

* This tool can save estimation results. Up to 20 projects can be saved.

* It's being calculated by 1TB = 1024GB in this tool.

* When you delete the Cookie data of Internet Explorer, the list of settings you have saved with ?Save? button will also be deleted.

* Tool specifications and other details are subject to change without prior notification.

<Recommended operating environment>

* Operating system : Windows Vista/7/8/8.1

* Web browser : Internet Explorer 8/9/10/11

* Memory : 256 MB

* Display resolution : 1024 x 768 or larger

* Disk space requirements :10 MB or more
